

FEW SURPRISES IN PRIMARY ELECTION

Harry Baldwin Leads Entire Ticket—Joseph Levi Noses Enos Vincent Out For Sixth Place On Republican Representative Ticket

There were but few surprises in the results of the primary election on Maui, and the only close contest was between Enos Vincent and Joseph Levi for the sixth place on the Republican representative ticket. Vincent lost out by a few more than seventy votes and Joseph took the last place on the Republican ticket by that margin.

Vincent's total was helped out greatly by the vote he secured in Kalaupapa settlement where he was given over a hundred votes. Even Antonio Tavares, an old favorite there, received only about eighty votes from the penned-up Molokai voters. This was Vincent's first try for election and he received 773 votes. Some of the seven men he defeated received less than 300 votes.

Ed. Waiahole led the Republican representative ticket with 1062 votes, with Tavares second with 1017. John Walsh was third man with a total of 934. Walsh's big vote was not a surprise to his friends and those who had closely followed his campaign, although his big vote did startle some of the Hawaiian politicians, who had claimed that if he was nominated he would be the sixth man on the ticket. Walsh feels that he would have secured from 200 to 300 more votes if the balloting had been open. John Brown Jr., received 867 votes, Manuel Gomes Paschoal, 881 and Levi Joseph, 847.

In the delegate race, Abe Louisson only secured seventy-nine votes while his opponent Kuhio Kalaniana'ole got a total of 1328 votes. Link McCandless received 396 votes on this island. Harry Baldwin, candidate for nomination as one of the Republican senators from this island led the entire ticket at the primary voting. His total of votes was 1421, ninety-three more votes than secured by Prince Kuhio on Maui.

Dr. Raymond, the Democratic candidate, received sixty-six more votes than the second Republican candidate, George P. Cooke. Raymond's total was 879. Cooke got 793 votes. The contest was closer between Cooke and Raymond than was expected by the supporters of Democratic candidate, some of whom had confidently expected the Bourbon candidate to get more than 1000 votes. As a result of the primary election the Raymond supporters are not so confident that the Molokai candidate will be defeated at the November election.

There were a number of odd features about the balloting for Raymond and Cooke. Several precincts on Molokai gave the Maui man a majority of the votes cast, while Cooke managed to get big totals in parts of Maui where it was thought that Raymond was exceptionally strong.

The race for the second Maui senatorship at the November election is believed to be the only probable contest by the local politicians. They say the Raymond-Cooke contest is bound to be close, with no more certainty now as to the outcome than there is at present in the presidential race between Hughes and Wilson.

Republicans declare that the Democrats will not be able to elect a single one of their four representative candidates. The Democrats are hardly more optimistic, although they maintain that Manuel Picanco will make a hard fight for the sixth place.

Raymond Resigns Three Positions

Dr. J. H. Raymond, Democratic candidate for election as senator from this island, has tendered his resignation to Governor L. Pinkham for all the territorial positions he holds at the present time. The resignations are to take place on November 1st. This action was taken by Dr. Raymond to permit him to comply with the territorial law and make his election to a territorial office legal.

Dr. Raymond had three positions to resign from: that of Maui supervisor, member of the Maui Loan Fund Commission and as chairman of the territorial land board. There are no applicants for appointment as supervisor to fill the vacancy created by Dr. Raymond, so far as is known. It is usually the political rule, it is said, to leave the positions open, where the resignations are made to comply with a technical requirement, until after the election is held.

In case Dr. Raymond is not elected he will likely be reappointed to the three positions, it is thought.

Wailuku Church Has Celebration

Union's Fiftieth Anniversary Commemorated By Services And Festivals For Three Days—Many Ministers And Congregation Attend

The fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the Wailuku Union Church was celebrated with fitting ceremonies on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. The first service, which was largely attended, was held at half past three on Sunday at which a sermon dealing with the work of the church was delivered by the minister upon the subject, "The Inheritance of Faith." Mrs. Geo. N. Weight, Jr. was installed as deaconess, while nine new members were received into the organization.

On Sunday evening Rev. P. Judd of the Hawaiian Board, Ensign Puck of the Salvation Army, Rev. J. Chas. Viliers, rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, and Rev. Frank S. Scudder, the superintendent of the Japanese work of the Hawaiian Board, were the speakers. A liberal offering for the Church Building Society was taken at the Sunday services.

A most interesting meeting for the ministers and evangelists of central and west Maui was held on Monday, both morning and afternoon. In the evening the church was crowded with people who had accepted the invitation to the services. Addresses were

More Room Is County Show Cry

Demands Of Exhibitors Shows Need Of More Space Urgent At Every Meeting Of Maui County Fair Committees

FIRE WORKS TO WIND-UP FAIR

Fire works is to be the final feature of the Maui County Fair on Saturday evening, December 2nd, according to a decision reached by the executive committee at the meeting held yesterday. The committeemen were all agreed that fire works for the last evening would be appreciated and it was decided to cable at once for a large supply. The fire works will likely be set off from the sand hills on the Kahului side of the fair grounds.

At every successive meeting of the general Maui County Fair committee the cry for more space grows more clamorous and plans have to be rearranged to suit the demands for additional room. When the ten-acre base ball diamond site was first secured the question of ground room for the fair was thought to be settled once for all, but a meeting or two afterward it was declared that the base ball grounds would not hold all the exhibits.

Then plans were made to get and use the addition to Market street leading to the ball park. Again the question was brought up at another meeting and it was moved to secure the use of the Alexander House gymnasium, the Chinese church and another building which are contiguous to the ball park.

The familiar question was again raised at the fair meeting held yesterday and the suggestion was made and will be followed out that no automobiles be allowed to park in the grounds. To provide room for the autos the old base ball grounds will be utilized and probably all the other vacant lots near the park.

The cry for space is not an idle one, and effort to secure room would not be made if it were not for the many exhibits that are being listed and the great amount of space required by the larger ones. In the livestock division alone, it is said that 100 stalls, at the lowest estimate will be needed. At Hilo there were only about thirty stalls, although this was one of the most important exhibits of the Hawaii fair.

Japanese Consul Visiting Maui

Accompanied by his secretary, R. Mori, the Japanese consul general for the Hawaiian Islands, arrived on Maui last Wednesday night for a personal investigation of the conditions of the people of his race on this island. Consul Mori previously made a similar visit to Kaula.

Upon his arrival here the consul was met by a number of prominent Japanese who since have been escorting him about the island. On Wednesday evening he was entertained at a banquet at the Maui Hotel. A big reception was held in his honor last night in the old Wailuku mill, so all the Japanese of the district could meet him.

He expects to be on Maui about two weeks, during which every section of the island will be visited.

Hawaii Is Growing In Popularity Fast

W. O. Aiken, Maui Member Of Promotion Committee Writes That Everyone On Mainland Seems Greatly Interested In The Island

W. O. Aiken of Maui, who represents this island on the promotion committee, and who is now touring the mainland, has written to friends here concerning his trip and winds up with the following paragraphs:

"I have seen some fine hotels and have seen some fine roads. After the boulevards in California and all places leading to their beauty spots and places of amusement, it gives one a feeling of shame to think of the road you must pass over to cover the short distance from Fort street to Waikiki, famed the world over as the finest beach and place of amusement of its kind known."

With regard to the San Diego exposition Mr. Aiken says:

"As a Hawaiian exhibit, what we have there is not much to speak of, but as merely a cog in the Pan Pacific, perhaps is worth while. The exposition is very poorly attended, but it is a beautiful display and deserves better of Hawaii."

I attended the show given in the Hawaiian Village on the Isthmus. I saw the hula as given there and found nothing to complain of. The hula was a modified form of our national dance and not the disgusting show that it has been said to be. Only Hawaiians are now connected with it, and in their portrayal of 'Old Hawaii' have not done so badly. A part-Hawaiian with his wife and three children—two girls and one boy—were the main features.

"I find much interest in Hawaii everywhere, and have had many chances to exhibit my fine photographs to advantage. Have heard 'Aloha Oe' and 'On the Beach at Waikiki' played in almost every city we have been in."

GASOLINE SHORTAGE IS STOPPED BY TANKER ATLAS

By the arrival of the tanker Atlas yesterday, the shortage of gasoline, from which motorists and others have been suffering since last Saturday, was checked. The arrival of the Hilonian early in the week also helped to increase the local supply. The shortage became marked last Saturday when the rent automobile men began offering as much as fifty cents a gallon for small supplies to carry them over until a cargo arrived. The tanker brought a full cargo and it is said that there is now enough gasoline on the island to last for another three weeks.

The supervisors today granted permission to the Maui County Fair committee to close up the extension of Market street and use it for exhibits during the fair dates.

Boys' Fall From Automobile Fatal

Young Wills Dies From Fractured Skull Three Days After Being Thrown From Car — Accident Is Coroner's Verdict

Thrown from an automobile on which he was riding to Wailuku last Saturday night, fourteen-year old Andrew Wills of Waikapu received a fractured skull, from which he died last Wednesday.

Young Wills and four companions of about the same age were all on a small roadster. Two were riding in the seat, two on the back of the car and Wills was sitting on the tool box on the running board of the auto. His fall from the car was not noticed at the time it happened by any of the other boys, but after they had gone some distance one of them looked back and saw something lying in the road. It was then that Wills was missed. The boys went back and picked him up and carried him to the hospital. The fatal accident happened just on the outskirts of Wailuku and near the home of Sheriff Clem Crowell.

What caused Wills to be thrown or forced from the car is unknown, although the theory has been advanced that he was brushed from the car while the auto was passing an animal in the road. This theory was not, however, established at the coroners' inquest, which was held to investigate the accident.

The coroners' jury composed of M. C. Ross, J. O. McGuire, Luke Rogers, George Edwards, Joe do Rego and L. B. Kaumehelewa returned a verdict that the death was caused by an accidental fall from the automobile.

Wills was a large boy, larger than most of men, and of robust health. He was an adopted son of A. Gross of Waikapu. Funeral services for the interment of the body were held yesterday.

Swimming Meet Big Success

The swimming meet at the Alexander House Gymnasium Tank was an entirely new feature and was well attended by most appreciative spectators. The tank was extremely well lighted by two immense electric lamps, loaned by the Wailuku Sugar Company for the occasion, and by numerous Japanese lanterns electrically lighted and arranged in the shape of a big capital A.

The teams were all in dead earnest and did their very best work. The A. H. G. boys scored 23 points as against 27 points by the High School Aquatic Club.

The A. H. G. girls' team was the surprise of the day securing a score of 27 to 13 against the girls of the High School.

The officers of the meet were as follows: Judges—S. Short, D. Townsend, R. Hughes; timers—F. Lufkin and Wm. Chillingworth; starter—A. Burdick; announcer—E. L. Corson.

It is rumored that a return meet will be asked for soon.

Following the swimming meet the dance in the Gymnasium proved a lasting attraction until midnight. A large part of the success of the dance was due to the pleasing numbers of the Gymnasium Orchestra offered.

The proceeds of the meet will help materially in completing the funds that are being secured for the building of the tennis courts that are now well under construction.

Friends of Will J. Cooper, manager and editor of the Maui News, and Mrs. Cooper, have received cards from them stating they are having a fine trip to the states. The last cards received states that they were in Los Angeles, but were intending to leave in a few days for Mississippi for a visit with relatives.

SUPERVISORS PROVIDE FOR ROAD MAINTENANCE

The long sought for appropriation for the oiling of the pali road to Lahaina has finally been passed by the board of supervisors. The measure was passed as a "maintenance" one, which means that oil will be placed on the Lahaina road as often as County Engineer Cox thinks is necessary. Provision was made also for the macadamizing and oiling of Vineyard street and for the rebuilding of the Kehel road with gravel. Initial plans were approved for the starting of a new waterworks at Kaupakalua.

Herbert Wade Strong Witness

Coast Papers Tell How Alleged Dynamiter Was Convicted Through Testimony Of Haiku School Principal—He Was Able To Identify Warren K. Billings

Herbert A. Wade, principal of the Haiku, Maui, school, proved an important witness in the sensational bomb plot case in San Francisco, which resulted in the conviction of Warren K. Billings.

News has come from the coast that at the trial of Billings, the bomb-plot suspect, Wade identified Billings as a man he saw in a San Francisco dental office which figured prominently in the police investigations.

Wade told of visiting the dental offices on the second floor at 721 Market street on July 22. His testimony in brief was as follows:

"I was at the street doorway," said Wade, "looking at the porcelain teeth in the exhibit case and just about to go up to get my teeth fixed when Billings passed me and went up the stairs. I noticed him particularly, because it occurred to me that he had slipped in ahead of me and would beat me to the dentist. As I did not want to have to wait, I did not go up. I am therefore positive that this man was Billings. He carried a dark, reddish-brown suit case about 20 inches long, shorter and wider than the ordinary."

On cross-examination Wade fixed the time at about 1 p. m. He admitted that he could not recognize or identify anyone else who passed him there, but insisted that his thought that Billings had beaten him to the dentist's chair made him take careful note of the man. He saw two others attempt to go up, he said, but could not describe them. One of the men, he said, might have been Mrs. Mooney, but he could not be sure.

Wade described the attire of Billings as a dark gray suit with a dark soft hat. Asked to state the height of the man he described as Billings, Wade replied that he was about 5 feet 5 inches.

BOSTON RED SOCKS TAKE WORLD SERIES

Fifth Game And Championship Won By Splendid Pitching Of Shores --- Brooklyn Gets Only One Run

NEW YORK, October 12—With a score of four to one, the Boston Red Socks won the fifth game and the world's base ball championship today from the Brooklyn team, after a hard fought battle in which there was a decided reverse for the Dodgers following the first inning.

Shore, the Boston pitcher, held the Dodgers down to three hits and the one run. After the first run, the "Hop Slinger" was master of the game until the end of the ninth inning.

The only score of the Brooklyn team was made in the first inning. The National team was again weak and unsteady in its fielding. By winning the game today the Red Socks repeated their former feat of winning their game after being behind.

But after the first inning, Shore gained his control and confidence and the early lead of his opponents for the championship and the world series' money melted quickly away.

More than 42,000 excited base ball fans saw the concluding game of the series.

Brooklyn only took one game in the series and Boston four.

NEW YORK, October 13—Liners which have been waiting here for orders have decided to dare a repetition of the German submarine raid and have sailed for British ports. Adriatic, Hellig and Olav have left here with 700 passengers. The vessels left the harbor with no lights showing. A few American citizens are aboard the ship.

The Kingston reports her safety to New York agents, with the statement that the vessel was never near Nantucket.

INDIANAPOLIS, October 12—President Wilson declared in a speech here that he wants no loose talking. He tells convention that public speakers should put up facts or shut up.

LONDON, October 13—"Mad" King Otto of Bavaria is dead, after an illness of long duration.

Reports say that Greek rebellion is growing and that the rebels are marching against Bulgarians.

BAYONNE, October 13—One person was killed in strike rioting here and twenty others hurt. The refinery sacks were set afire.
